1. The import prices of grains and other foods include the cost of the food commodity, the insurance, the freight to the East German border and the reloading charges at West Litovsk. To these prices must also be added a 3.3 per cent EEA trade margin. The total price then makes up the current import price, which the EEA should charge the VEB (government agricultural commodities procurement agencies). Not included in the quoted prices are the freight charges from the East German border to the VEB warehouse or to food processing plants, and the VEB service charge.
2. The domestic prices are calculated f.o.b. the VEB warehouse and do not include the trade margin and the freight expenses from the VEB warehouse to the consumer; but they do include the "Fruchtarusch" premium of DEM 10. The average freight expenses and trade margins amount to DEM 30 a ton of grain.
3. To the import prices of nuts and soyabeans from China, must be added the operating cost of DEM 60 a ton for pressing the nuts and beans, and for the refined product, an additional DEM 60 must be added, in addition to the freight charges and trade margins which usually amount to DEM 63.
4. In order to conceal the difference between the actual import price and the domestic price for the public, the East German government subsidizes the difference in price.
5. The following table indicates the price per ton of imported grains, nuts and soyabeans and the price per ton charged the East German consumer:

Commodity	Import price	Price f.o.b. VEB
Wheat	DEM 305.33	DEM 218.00
Barley	DEM 324.04	DEM 234.00
Oats	DEM 235.64	DEM 195.00
Corn	DEM 357.52	DEM 302.00
Rye	DEM 362.00	DEM 206.00
Barley (for breweries)	DEM 411.15	DEM 244.00
Nuts from China	DEM 700.70	- - -
Soyabeans from China	DEM 400.00	- - -
